San Francisco Art Exposition
The grandest of the grand art shows returns to Fort Mason Center. The San Francisco International Art Exposition holds its fifth annual exhibition here this month. On view are works by the classic and celebrated as well as the young and cutting-edge. The Expo shows the creative efforts of artists from 100 of the world's most prestigious galleries.

Private collectors, museum curators, corporate consultants, and art enthusiasts can see and select works by Andy Warhol, Georgia O'Keefe, David Hockney, Edward Weston, Willem de Kooning, Richard Diebenkorn, Richard Avedon, and the emerging artists who will set the tone for the new year and the new century. More than 2,000 artists are represented in this comprehensive and eclectic collection of modern and contemporary artwork—painting, drawing, photography, printmaking, sculpture, video, installation, and mixed media.

Join the San Francisco Art Institute for the Opening Night Preview Benefit—an event of artful elegance—and be among the first to view this vast collection of exciting art. Opening Night offers attendees various ways to contribute to this important institution and gain special access to the exposition. (See January 16.)

Prints San Francisco 2003
Move from the 15th century to the 21st in the world of fine prints. The inventories of 17 distinguished print dealers create an exhibition that spans time, place, culture, and style. Prints San Francisco 2003 features work from the Belle Epoque, works from the Impressionist, Secessionist, and Expressionist movements, as well as works from the Taller de Gráfica and the muralists. U.S., European, and Mexican artists are well represented. International prints from the 20th and 21st centuries illustrate modernist, Atelier 17, Abstract Expressionist works, and modern Dutch Prints. And the fine Japanese work features masters of Ukiyo-e, shin-hanga and sosakku-hanga.

Whether visitors are collectors, students, scholars, or just curious, this excellent collection, sponsored by the International Fine Print Dealers Association, provides fascinating insights into the evolution of images over the centuries.

The Achenbach Graphic Arts Council hosts a gala preview for this event. The gala benefits the Achenbach Foundation for the Graphic Arts acquisition fund. See January 17.

Ashes To Art
Where to spend eternity? That is the question. Artists provide some interesting answers in Ashes to Art, an exhibit of 100 urns and vessels designed to hold the ashes of the departed. In an age when more people request cremation than burial, many desire to make a statement about their own lives or honor the deaths of loved ones through fine art. Humor, vitality, wisdom, and an unlimited range of idiosyncrasies are reflected in the works of fine artists who render strikingly individual approaches to mortality. Funeria's presentation, Ashes to Art, challenges both convention and imagination and transforms traditions with original works by such master glass artists as William Morris and many other artists from around the world. See January 30 for details.

Nils Krueger, Sculpture Exhibition
Though exhibited internationally, San Francisco-based sculptor Nils Krueger contributes to January's visually stunning feast for the eyes with his work in steel. Installed at Fort Mason's intimate Gatehouse, Krueger gives new meaning to "body of work" by exploring the inner spatial relationships of the human form.

Nils Krueger

"I choose figurative representation not because of an interest in figurative narrative, Krueger says, "but because the human form is of infinite complexity and subtle physical structure. The figure is not my subject per se, but rather it clearly demonstrates my belief in an underlying structure of forces and geometry in all of nature's forms."

The artist, who will be present at the exhibition, welcomes discussion of his work. For details, see January 17.

TIME FOR THE VINES

HERBST & FESTIVAL PAVILIONS

ZAP Vintners

Join the "Gang of Pour" and other red wine fanatics at the Association of Zinfandel Growers & Producers' massive 12th Annual ZAP Wine Tasting in late January. More than 300 Zinfandel wineries from seven California growing regions fill both pavilions with a fantastic selection of vintage ruby elixirs.

"Interest in this event seems to be insatiable," says ZAP's Executive Director Rebecca Robinson. The 2002 ZAP Tasting attracted more than 8,000 tasters, including sommeliers, retailers, distributors, and wine lovers. ZAP Festival participants say that Zinfandel is rapidly becoming a world-class pour and a hot market.

"The enthusiasm is telling us that the huge grass roots interest in the renegade Zinfandel is starting ... to be taken more seriously by the wine establishment," says Dave Pramuk of Napa Valley's Robert Biale Vineyards.

Fort Mason's ZAP Tasting is part of the four-day ZAP Festival. Flights of Fancy, another ZAP Fest event, is a regional showcase of California Zins at the Copia culinary arts center in Napa. ZAP's Blue Jeans To Black Tie gala on January 24 is not the usual formal event—attendees dine with the winemakers, wearing everything from Scottish kilts to cowboy gear.

ZAP also hosts a Good Eats and Zinfandel wine and cuisine pairing at Alameda's Rosenblum Cellars on January 23 and stages a Zinfandel roadshow for the America's Heritage Wine Tours later in 2003.

For more information on ZAP's Zinfandel Tasting, see January 25 or visit www.zinfandel.org.

NEW FESTIVAL TAKES A CRACK AT CRABS

FESTIVAL PAVILION, FIREHOUSE & BUILDING C

First San Francisco Crab Festival

Local crustaceans star in the San Francisco Convention & Visitors Bureau's first San Francisco Crab Festival at Fort Mason Center. Vintners, microbrewers, chefs, artists, and entertainers converge at the Festival Pavilion to kick off a month-long celebration in honor of the Pacific Coast's famed Dungeness crab.

The Crab Festival begins January 31 with the 14th Annual Bon Appétit Wine & Spirits Focus, a gala matching crab cuisine with fine regional wines, beer, and live entertainment. San Francisco is the first stop on Bon Appétit magazine's six-city tour benefiting The Make-A-Wish Foundation, which helps children with life-threatening illnesses.

The Wine & Spirits Focus features food from top-notch San Francisco restaurants and libations selected by the Bon Appétit Tasting Panel. Chefs from such destination spots as Farallon, Greens, Hawthorne Lane, and Rubicon host tastings of their signature dishes. Viking Range experts conduct professional cooking demonstrations as well.

Festivities continue at the Crab & Wine Marketplace in the Festival Pavilion on Saturday and Sunday, February 1 and 2. This affordable event offers more culinary demonstrations, tastings, arts and crafts, children's activities, and educational programs.

During the Marketplace, San Francisco chefs face off in "The Challenge of the Masters" competing for the "Crab Challenge Master" title. Private Marketplace tastings and seminars in Fort Mason's Firehouse include a presentation on sparkling wines by Domaine Chandon, Napa Valley's premiere vineyard estate and restaurant.

Restaurants and merchants in San Francisco keep the Crab Festival spirit alive throughout February. Fisherman's Wharf businesses provide special deals during the Walk About The Wharf event from February 7 to 17. Local restaurants participating in the Dungeness Dining program feature crab menu choices and crab-themed prix fixe meals. The Red & White Fleet's Crab Feast on the Bay cruises depart from Pier 43-1/2 during February.

The San Francisco Crab Festival debuts Friday January 31 through Sunday February 2. Refer to the January 31 calendar listing or contact the Convention & Visitors Bureau at www.sfvisitor.org or (415) 391-2000 for details. For more information on the Wine & Spirits Focus, visit Bon Appétit's event site at www.subscriberdirect.com/bonappetit.

FORT MASON CENTER

2002 EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR'S REPORT

We're pleased to report that Fort Mason Center—celebrating its 25th Anniversary—has had another successful year of operation. Unfortunately, like so many others, we felt the impact of the events of September 11 and the general downturn in the economy. However, because of our broad and varied community support and innovative programs, we were able to achieve nearly all of our financial and programmatic objectives. As a result, we delivered on our mission to create and preserve a vital and growing cultural, educational and recreational Center. And, along with our partner, the National Park Service, we were able to continue to reflect Fort Mason's unique history as well as the talents and interests of the people of the Bay Area.

Programs
Those who presented here—many in their third decade at the Center—educated, enlightened, delighted, and entertained more than 1.6 million visitors.

In addition to such major national events as the San Francisco Fall Antiques Show, Arts of Pacific Asia, Macy's Passport Show, the San Francisco International Art Exposition, and Photo San Francisco, Fort Mason Center hosted a wide array of art, education, and cultural events.

Programs at the Center, at the Cowell Theatre, and at the Herbst International Exhibition Hall in the Presidio, included a wide range of major arts and craft shows, wine tastings, and book fairs. The programs ranged from "Fusión Flamenca" to the San Francisco Butoh Festival to the New Pickle Circus. We hosted orchid shows, bamboo festivals, ecological conferences, and our own 25th Anniversary celebration.

Finally, more than 40 of Fort Mason's resident non-profit organizations provided an equally wide range of important programs, classes, and services. These groups are dedicated non-profits working to support the arts, ecology, and personal growth. Our congratulations go out to the Environmental Traveling Companions as they celebrate their 30th anniversary this year and Young Performers Theatre as they celebrate their 20th. We continue to be dazzled by the Magic Theatre and the wonderful galleries and museums that daily celebrate the ethnic and cultural diversity of the Bay Area.

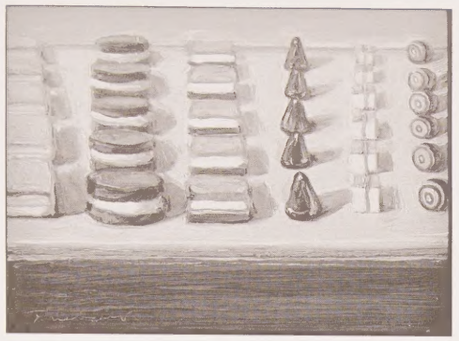
Shulte Grant For The Arts And Crafts
With our deepest gratitude to the late Mrs. Leta Shulte, the Fort Mason Foundation launched a major grants program. The Shulte Grant for the Arts and Crafts provides up to $80,000 in grants annually for new programs in the arts and crafts. This is an exciting opportunity to foster, promote, and provide education in the arts and crafts for both children and adults. The first round of grants, designed to strengthen existing institutions that support artists and launch new cultural endeavors, will be announced this Spring.

Preservation
This was a year of genuine accomplishment. We were fortunate to receive two major grants that were applied toward the preservation of the Center. First we received $80,000 from Arthouse through its Emergency Property-Related Subsidies Program. The grant allowed us to make much-needed improvements in the Cowell Theater. This included new carpeting and upgraded HVAC facilities. We also received—in partnership with the Golden Gate National Recreation Area—a $325,000 Save America's Treasures Grant (SAT). Administered by the U.S. Department of the Interior, the SAT grant is a highly targeted, nationwide program that identifies only the most important nationally recognized historic landmarks. Fort Mason Center is extremely proud to have been a recipient.

In addition, we continued to invest in preservation through major capital improvement projects. These included the addition of special safety railings in building C, and creating a more effective drainage system in front of the Pavilions to prevent flooding.

Finally, the Foundation initiated its Historic Preservation Fund, which benefited from two events during the year: The 2002 Photo San Francisco opening and the Fort Mason Foundation 25th Anniversary Gala contributed $75,000 to the fund that will play a pivotal role in Fort Mason Center's enduring legacy.

Planning For The Future
During 2002, one of our most important goals was realized. The National Park Service designated the Fort Mason Foundation as the sole negotiating party of a new 50-year agreement for the operation and preservation of the Center. Pier 1 was assigned to the Foundation as part of this new arrangement. This means we will take on added responsibility for the historic preservation of the Center and, at the same time, maintain and expand our programs to further enhance our contribution to the cultural, educational and recreational experience of the Bay Area. Negotiations are now underway, and we plan to conclude a new agreement in the coming year. While these changes create greater challenges, they also enable us to engage in more effective, long-term planning.



San Francisco International Art Exposition
"Confection Rows" by Wayne Thiebaud

To that end, the foundation has begun the process. We have developed a five-year strategic plan to help chart our course. The plan* is a blueprint for our continued growth and development as a major cultural and educational center that serves the needs of our community with an increasingly national and international reach. As part of that plan, we introduced a new logo and initiated a comprehensive approach for the design of new and better signage.

Other important efforts during the year included the planning for the seismic strengthening of the Herbst Pavilion substructure in 2003. This $13 million project will commence in March 2003, with, we believe, a minimal impact on Center operations.

The Keys to Success
During the last 25 years we have witnessed a remarkable phenomenon. From humble beginnings as an abandoned and dilapidated U.S. Army base, Fort Mason Center has emerged as a major cultural force thanks to the vision and energy of the community. Whether one participates in a capital campaign, supports us as a long-term resident, or creates an event, we thank the many who have contributed so much to the success and vitality of this unique institution.

We are now poised to make sure Fort Mason Center continues that role for the generations to come, and we look forward to your continued contributions to preserve this valuable relationship with the people of the Bay Area.

Alexander Zwissler
Executive Director

GENIUS IN MOTION

COWELL THEATER

Einstein's Daughters

Just as Albert Einstein sparked a revolution in modern physics, his first wife stimulated a similar transformation in modern dance in Einstein's Daughters. The new multimedia performance from Kim Epifano and Epiphany Productions features dancing, special effects, and gravity-defying aerial feats inspired by the life of Mileva Maric Einstein.

Through the dynamics of bodies in motion, Epifano examines the legacy of Mileva Einstein, a gifted mathematician who may have helped create basic concepts leading to the theory of relativity, according to some scholars. Epifano catapults from Mileva Einstein's life as a scientist and mother into an expression of feminine intelligence, human potential, and genius.

Along the way, the performance peels back the layers of history to calculate new equations for matters of the heart and theories of space and time. In addition to an original score for stringed instruments and a set design incorporating found objects, the production features intricate aerial rigging and a mesmerizing display of whirling stage lights.

Einstein's Daughters rockets into the Cowell Theater in mid-January. For more information, see January 17 or look at www.epiphanydance.org.

EXPLORING THE BODY FAMILIAR

MAGIC THEATRE

Uncertain times call for introspection and self-discovery, a challenge the Magic Theatre has taken on with its newly commissioned world premiere of Body Familiar. Acclaimed Bay Area choreographer Joe Goode wrote and directs his first full-length play, conceived as a cross-discipline performance piece melding dance and theatrical techniques.

In Body Familiar, Goode uses actors and dancers to meditate on memory, love, and "the deep, unspoken knowledge that lies within the body." Through innovative choreography and staging, Goode seeks to explore the interior drama of ordinary people in commonplace situations. In the world of Body Familiar, a character standing in a supermarket checkout line might have a personal epiphany, given the right circumstances.

In his work for Joe Goode Performance Group, the director frequently stretches artistic limits by combining movement, spoken word, song, and visual elements to "pierce the veil of toughness that we all have in our lives and to uncover the vulnerable center." As a result of his groundbreaking work, Goode collaborates with leading performers and mounts productions at notable venues around the world.

Body Familiar previews at the Magic Theatre January 3 through 9 and opens January 10. For more information see January 3, www.magictheatre.org, and www.joegoode.org.

VISIONARY DANCE

COWELL THEATER

Liss Fain Dance moves performance into a new visual realm with Frames Of Light, a collaborative production emphasizing light, design, and motion. Company founder and choreographer Liss Fain experiments with light as a sculptural medium that frames dancers and movement onstage.

Fain's collaborators add their own distinctive style to Frames Of Light. Jo Kreiter and other aerialists from Flyaway Productions perform "Thirst," a physical exploration of thirst, dehydration, and unmet need. Four women gather on a set with swinging glass containers of salt and a wide, steel well. "Thirst" forms the nucleus of a longer, environmentally themed work under development, The Grim Arithmetic of Water.

Frames Of Light

Visual designer Matthew Antaky worked with Fain, Kreiter, and Cynthia Adams of Fellow Travelers to enhance the performance by expanding how dancers interact with sculptural and architectural aspects of the stage environment.

Liss Fain has a history of creating breakthrough pieces that mix visual art and technology with movement. In Quarry, an earlier Cowell Theater production, Fain juxtaposed dancers with onstage scrim projections of streaming, real-time Internet video of Napa artist Richard Deutsch carving a monumental sculpture. Fain has pursued interactive video projects with other collaborators, including the Exploratorium and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Frames Of Light illuminates the Cowell Theater in late January. See January 31 for more details.

PEOPLESCAPES

Feed The Homeless Rice-A-Roni
by Nancy Calef

FORT MASON CENTER MAIN OFFICE

Nancy Calef's oil and mixed-media paintings satirize the foibles of human nature while addressing issues of contemporary society. She breaks the plane of the canvas with sculpture and found objects to exaggerate emotions and create tension.

"I paint people in ordinary situations," says Calef. "By breaking the plane of the canvas with sculpture and found objects, I create a more whimsical and dynamic style."

Born in the Bronx, New York, Calef completed Bronx High School of Science at 15, and studied painting and sculpture on scholarship at the College of New Rochelle. She traveled extensively throughout Europe, Central America, Southeast Asia, and India, deepening her understanding of the physical, cultural, and spiritual diversity of the world in the process. She has lived in San Francisco since 1977.

Calef's "peoplescapes" reflect her experiences with, in her words, "the harsher side of urban life." Many of the paintings address issues in our society, for example the juxtaposition of homeless people with wealthy arts patrons. Her addition of three-dimensional objects intensifies her message while maintaining a humorous edge.

Jack Levine, former president of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, said, "...Nancy's subject matter and palette express a view of the world beyond her years."

Calef has exhibited in many solo and group shows, including many at the George Krevsky Gallery in San Francisco. Her work is in numerous private collections, and can be seen at www.nancycalefgallery.com. Her exhibition in the Fort Mason Center Main Office begins on January 8 and continues until March 27. Einstein's Daughters Kim Epifano, the Bay Area's own force of nature, challenges the laws of motion in her newest dance creation inspired by the life of Mileva Maric Einstein, the first wife of Albert Einstein. A gifted mathematician in her own right, Mileva Maric Einstein has been the subject of recent inquiries into her influence on her famous husband and his equally famous theories. Choreographer Epifano creates a multimedia performance piece using Mileva's story as a starting point for a gravity-defying investigation of human potential & genius.
